El ciclista británico Jonathan Tiernan-Locke (Endura Racing) se ha proclamado vencedor del Tour del Mediterráneo tras lograr el triunfo en la cuarta y última etapa imponiéndose al español Dani Navarro (Saxo Bank). El corredor inglés ha aprovechado la última ascensión de la etapa, marcada por la suspensión de la subida a Mont Faron por la intensa nevada, para lograr a sus 27 años su primera carrera por etapas.

Tiernan-Locke lanzó su ataque a dos kilómetros de la línea de meta, situada en el Col de Garde, para llegar en solitario, 28 segundos por delante del español Daniel Navarro (Saxo Bank) y el italiano Stefano Garzelli (Acqua&Sapone), segundo y tercero de la etapa respectivamente.

De esta manera, Tiernan-Locke ascendía desde el tercer puesto al liderato de la prueba y arrebataba el puesto de privilegio al holandés Michel Kreder (Garmin), que había pasado a comandar la prueba el sábado tras su victoria de etapa y que contaba con diez segundos de ventaja sobre el ciclista británico.

El colombiano Nairo Quintana (Movistar), cumplió una destacada carrera, ya que entró en el puesto 16 de la fracción a 27 segundos del vencedor y de esta manera el boyacense se trepó al puesto 22 de la general individual a 47 segundos. Mientras que el caleño Leonardo Duque (Cofidis), terminó en el puesto 45 a 2:12 segundos. El otro latinoamericano en la competencia fue el costarricense Andrey Amador (Movistar), quien se ubicó al final en el puesto 10 a 47 segundos de Tiernan-Lock.
